

Electronic Streamlined Non-Competing Award Process (eSNAP)

December 9, 2002

The eSNAP pilot is moving steadily ahead. With the release of NIH eRA Commons 2.2 on Friday, December 6, we have corrected a number of bugs that were holding up some submissions.

Currently, four grantee organizations are pilot testing with eSNAP. We expect to add more over the next month.

We have successfully processed a number of eSNAPs—end-to-end—through the system. In January, we are planning some major changes to the user interface and, at that time, expect to bring the rest of the Commons Working Group (CWG) into the pilot.

There are some special instructions that pilot users need to follow when submitting grants that involve human subjects. See the links on the NIH eRA Commons Support Page for additional information.
